Sick Headache.

GENTS:—I have been subject to Sick Headache for years, and have tried, in vain, many advertised remedies and several physicians, but all to no purpose. At last I tried your B. B. Bitters—without much faith, I admit—but to-day I can truly say, that after taking the third bottle, I have not suffered from it. I recommend it to all my friends; several have been cured by it. My little grandson was permanently cured of Biliousness and Sick Headache, which were so severe as to cause convulsions. They haven't ceased since he commenced the use of B.B.B.

Scrofula

Is one of the most fatal scourges which afflict mankind. It is often inherited, but may be the result of improper vaccination, mercurial poison, uncleanliness, and various other causes. Chronic Sores, Ulcers, Abscesses, Cancerous Humors, and, in some cases, Emaciation and Consumption, result from a scrofulous condition of the blood. This disease can be cured by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

I inherited a scrofulous condition of the blood, which caused a derangement of my whole system. After taking less than four bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla I am

I was troubled with Scrofulous Sores for five years; but, after using a few bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the sores healed, and I have now good health.—Elizabeth Warnock, 51 Appleton street, Lowell, Mass.

Some months ago I was troubled with Scrofulous Sores on my leg. The limb was badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy failed until I used Ayer's Sarsaparilla. By taking three bottles of this medicine the sores have been healed, and my health is restored. I am grateful for the good it has done me.—Mrs. Ann O'Brian, 158 Sullivan st., New York.

REUNION.

REGIMENTAL OFFICERS, 1885.

It is twenty years, my comrades, twenty solid years to date,
Since we were stripling captains, dapper youngsters slim and straight;
And now in portly manhood, wise and serious, we are met,
To gossip of the stirring times of sword and bayonet.

Our portly manhood, as above, our silvered heads and all,
May be respected, more or less, by circles large or small;
But, my comrades, all the honors of our civil walks and ways
Seem but empty to the glory of the old heroic days.

Yet the martial pomp and grandeur, failing somehow to connect,
Were not always clearly present at the time, I recollect,
There were dusty, weary marches, not romantic in the least,
More especially if rations chanced to fail for man or beast.

There were times when human nature had to murmur just a bit;
There were seasons of bad language, yes, the truth I must admit;
There were bivouacs in the rain or snow, black darkness overhead,
The sodden ground beneath us, with a fence-rail for a bed.

But what appetites for lobscouse, and what dinners large and free,
Supplemented by a canteen full of "Commissary B";
With the haughty Sothron's hoe-cake, and the colored aunty's pie,
And a streamlet for a finger-bowl, if one meandered by.

Do you remember, comrades, how we fought and overcame
Those guerilla ducks and turkeys, war-like pigs and other game?
And those savage rebel chickens, who would die, but never yield,
Whom we faced with deathless valor on so many a Southern field?

Though we murmured, though our language was at times a trifle queer,
Though we had but little reverence even for a brigadier,
Though we grumbled at the Government with almost every breath,
Yet we faced the gray battalions, all undaunted, to the death.

We fought them and we killed them, and they killed us in return;
But we never thought to hate them, and we never cared to learn.
We met them on the picket lines, with flags of truce between:
They were "Johnnies," we were "Yanks," and better friends were never seen.

What anomalies and contrasts! I recall a day in June,
When the world was warm with summer, and the birds were all in tune;
Peace and beauty all about us, death and danger just ahead,
On our faces careless courage, in our hearts a somber dread.

Then the skirmish line went forward, and the only sounds we heard
Were the hum of droning insects and the carol of a bird;
Till, far off, a flash of fire, and a little cloud went by,
Like an angel's mantle floating down from out an azure sky.

Then a shell went screaming o'er us, and the air at once was rife
With a million whispering hornets, swiftly searching for a life;
And the birds and insects died away before the "rebel yell,"
The thunder of the battle, and the furious flames of hell.

Other memories come thronging. When our shoulder-straps were new
We were nearly all the world, but now, alas, we are so few;
Then we marched with ringing footsteps, looking gayly to the fore;
Now with wistful, dreamy glances, we look back to days of yore.

If the spirits of the dead revisit earth for weal or woe,
We might fancy they would join us, those dear friends of long ago,
Hush, who knows what ghostly comrades may have come with noiseless feet,
In the old familiar friendliness, to make our band complete?

McCLELLAN'S LAST MESSAGE.

In the Century magazine for May there is a paper by General McClellan on the Antietam campaign, ("From the Peninsula to Antietam,") in the preparation of which he was engaged when stricken by death. Mr. Wm. C. Prime, who is the General's literary executor, in communicating the articles to the Century, notes the interesting fact that the annexed tribute of admiration to "the army which loved him as he loved them," was the last thought his pen committed to paper. They are McClellan's last words to his comrades of the Army of the Potomac:

So long as life lasts the survivors of those glorious days will remember with quickened pulse the attitude of that army when it reached the goal for which it had striven with such transcendent heroism. Exhausted, depleted in numbers, bleeding at every pore, but still proud and defiant, and strong in the consciousness of a great feat of arms heroically accomplished, it stood ready to renew the struggle with undiminished ardor whenever its commander should give the word. It was one of those magnificent episodes which dignify a nation's history, and are fit subjects for the grandest efforts of the poet and painter.

The matter of great interest set forth by General McClellan in the Century paper is the effort he made to induce Halleck, the General-in-Chief, to order the withdrawal of the 11,000 men at Harper's Ferry, before Lee crossed into Maryland, in the fall of 1862, prior to the battle of Antietam. A few days before he went to the front, Secretary Seward consulted with him on the subject, and McClellan gave sound reasons why Harper's Ferry should be evacuated. After stating other military considerations, General McClellan goes on:

I added that if it were determined to hold the position the existing arrangements were all wrong, as it would be easy for the enemy to surround and capture the garrison, and that the garrison ought, at least, to be withdrawn to the Maryland Heights, where they could resist attack until relieved.

The secretary was much impressed by what I said, and asked me to accompany him to General Halleck, and repeat my statement to him. I acquiesced, and we went together to General Halleck's quarters, where we found that he had retired for the night. But he received us in his bedroom, when, after a preliminary explanation by the Secretary as to the interview being at his request, I said to Halleck precisely what I had stated to Mr. Seward.

Halleck received my statement with ill-concealed contempt—said that everything was all right as it was; that my views were entirely erroneous, etc., and soon bowed us out, leaving matters at Harper's Ferry precisely as they were.

As a result Stonewall Jackson swept down on Harper's Ferry, occupied Maryland Heights, took 11,000 prisoners, 73 cannon and 13,000 stand of small arms—a disaster that McClellan was overruled in his endeavors to prevent.

General McClellan in the Scribner paper also makes mention of the peculiar circumstances under which he fought the battles of South Mountain and Antietam—that is with a rope about his neck, so to speak. After describing the concentration of the army on the Maryland side of the Potomac early in September, he says:

As the time had now arrived for the army to advance, and I had received no orders to take command of it, but had been expressly told that the assignment of a commander had not been decided, I determined to solve the question for myself, and when I moved out from Washington with my staff and personal escort I left my card, with P. P. C. written upon it, at the White House, War Office and Secretary Seward's house, and went on my way.

I was afterwards accused of assuming command without authority, for nefarious purposes, and, in fact, fought in the battles of South Mountain and Antietam with a halter around my neck, for if the Army of the Potomac had been defeated, and I had survived I would, no doubt, have been tried for assuming authority without orders, and, in the state of feeling which so unjustly condemned the innocent and most meritorious General F. J. Porter, would probably have been condemned to death. I was fully aware of the risk I ran, but the path of duty was clear and I tried to follow it. It was absolutely necessary that Lee's army should be met, and in the state of affairs I have briefly described, there could be no hesitation on my part as to doing it promptly. Very few in the Army of the Potomac doubted the favorable result of the next collision with the Confederate army, but in other quarters not a little doubt prevailed, and the desire for very rapid movement, so loudly expressed after the result was gained, did not make itself heard during the movements preceding the battles; quite the contrary was the case, as I was more than once cautioned that I was moving too rashly and exposing the capital to an attack from the Virginia side.

This fits into the story previously narrated by General McClellan in his paper on the Peninsular campaign, of the way Stanton, Halleck and the junta of Radicals in and about Congress, thwarted his plans by every method within their power. He had enemies in the rear more effective because more treacherous than those in his front. They were responsible for the failure of the Peninsular campaign, and after Pope's humiliating failure, sent McClellan to meet Lee in Maryland so that he would have had to answer with his life for defeat at South Mountain or Antietam. He would have been made a scape-goat, just as Fitz John Porter has been made to stand for Pope's blunders and incapacity, for the last twenty years.

General McClellan gives his opinion of General Lee in this paper and in these words, referring to the tactical movements of the two commanders, between Pope's defeat and the battle of Antietam.

General Lee and I knew each other well before the war. We had served together in Mexico and commanded against each other in the Peninsula. I had the highest respect for his ability as a commander, and knew that he was not a general to be trifled with or carelessly afforded an opportunity of striking a fatal blow. Each of us naturally regarded his own army as the better, but each entertained the highest respect for the endurance, courage and fighting qualities of the opposing army; and this feeling extended to the officers and men. It was perfectly natural under these circumstances that both of us should exercise a certain amount of caution; I, in my endeavors to ascertain Lee's strength, position, and intentions before I struck the final blow; he to abstain from any extended movements of invasion, and to hold his army well in hand until he could be satisfied as to the condition of the Army of the Potomac after its second Bull Run campaign, and as to the intentions of its commander.

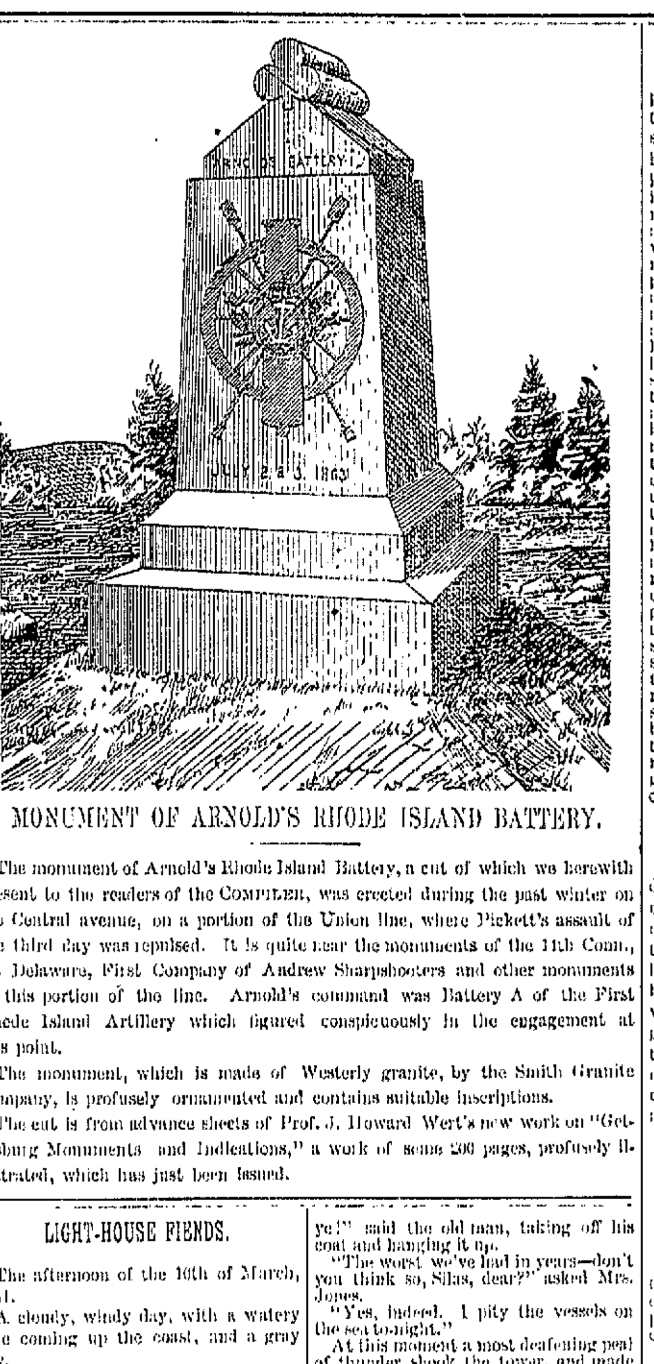
THE BALL THAT WOUNDED HANCOCK.—Dr. Lewis W. Read, of Norristown, thus relates the circumstances of General Hancock's recovery from his wound received at Gettysburg: "I was the medical director of the Pennsylvania Reserves, and just before the 1st of November, 1863, I came home on twenty-four hours leave of absence. I called to see the General, who was in bed at his father's residence. I found him very disheartened. He had grown thin, and looked pale and emaciated. He said he felt as if he was going to die, and that he had been probed and tortured to such an extent that death would be a relief. I endeavored to cheer him up, and as I was about bidding him farewell he said: 'Good bye, Doctor; I may never see you again.'

I had my hand on the door knob of his chamber, when he said: 'See here, Doctor, why don't you try to get this ball out. I have had all the reputation in the country at it; now let's have some of the practical.'

He was lying in the bed with his wounded limb actually flexed, and all the probing had been done with his leg bent at right angles. The ball had hit just below the right groin, within an inch of the femoral artery, while he was sitting in the saddle with his legs distended. I went down to my office for a probe with a concealed blade, and on my return Dr. Cooper and myself succeeded in straightening the limb and placing it as near as possible in the position it was when the ball struck him. I inserted the probe and it dropped fully eight inches into a channel and struck the ball, which was imbedded in the sharp bone which you sit upon. In a week's time the General was out on crutches, and in two weeks more he attended a Masonic gathering at Odd Fellows' Hall. I forgot the caliber of the bullet, but it was a big Minnie ball."

"TO THE POLE!"—Col. Gilder, a companion of Schwatka in his remarkable sledge journey from Depot Island to King William's Land, north of Hudson's bay, contemplates a novel method of reaching the north pole. The experience gained on that occasion has led him to believe that the pole may be reached, not by the means heretofore adopted by arctic navigators, whereby so many vessels have been wrecked and so many lives lost, but by dog sledges and a company of Esquimaux, with only a few white men to form the scientific part of the expedition. Col. Gilder has laid his plans before Lieut. Schwatka and Judge Charles P. Daly, president of the American Geographical Society, who are said to thoroughly and cordially approve of them. He has also been furnished with valuable data from the personal experiences of Lieut. Greely, who, while he thinks that Gilder may find the route from Cape Sabine to Fort Conger—Greely's station on Lady Franklin bay—impracticable may yet do good scientific work by crossing Schley Land and going on a voyage of discovery in the archipelago believed to exist there. As to the funds required for the expedition, it is stated that there is sufficient already subscribed in money and material to insure Col. Gilder in going, but he expects to have much more to make his undertaking a complete success. His plan is not unlike that of Capt. Hall, but more adventurous and on a much more extended scale.

GEN. SANTA ANNA'S CORK LEG.—Gov. Oglesby has received a letter from J. A. Gill, of Pekin, Ill., who served in an Illinois regiment in the Mexican war, stating that he has in his possession a cork leg which was worn by Santa Anna and left by him in a carriage as he escaped after the battle of Cerro Gordo, and offering to present it to the State to be placed in Memorial Hall. Gov. Oglesby accepted the offer and requested Mr. Gill to forward the leg.



MONUMENT OF ARNOLD'S RHODE ISLAND BATTERY.

The monument of Arnold's Rhode Island Battery, a cut of which we herewith present to the readers of the COMPILER, was erected during the past winter on the Central avenue, on a portion of the Union line, where Pickett's assault of the third day was repulsed. It is quite near the monuments of the 14th Conn., 1st Delaware, First Company of Andrew Sharpshooters and other monuments of this portion of the line. Arnold's command was Battery A of the First Rhode Island Artillery which figured conspicuously in the engagement at this point.

The monument, which is made of Westerly granite, by the Smith Granite Company, is profusely ornamented and contains suitable inscriptions.

The cut is from advance sheets of Prof. J. Howard Wert's new work on "Gettysburg Monuments and Indications," a work of some 200 pages, profusely illustrated, which has just been issued.

LIGHT-HOUSE FIENDS.

The afternoon of the 10th of March, 1811.

A cloudy, windy day, with a watery gale coming up the coast, and a gray sky.

Gordon Mandra, of Mandra Manor, sat in his cosy and elegantly-furnished library with a London newspaper in his hand.

Gordon Mandra was a dark, tall man, with features and bearing of the Spanish type: cruel eyes and long, straight, black hair, and by no means prepossessing in appearance and manners.

He does not read long before his door is quickly opened, and as quickly shut, and a little man, with little eyes and frightened face, falls in a chair panting.

"In Satan's name," angrily asked Mr. Mandra, "what's the matter with you, Bulbox?"

"Oh, Lord—oh! oh!"

"Are you mad, drunk, or—or what?"

"Oh, dear! oh, dear! he's not dead—he's coming back. Read that," giving Mandra a letter.

Mandra takes the letter, and as his eyes fall on the signature he utters a cry of fright.

"Not dead!" he exclaims, looking at Mr. Bulbox. "Not dead! Did we not see him lying breathless at our feet? Did we not bury our knives, thrice each, into his body?"

"Yes, yes! but he wasn't killed, after all! He's coming to England to expose us, and we'll all be hanged!"

"Yes, but we must prevent his coming."

"How, I should like to know. He says that the ship Wizard is bearing him out, and it will arrive in the morning, and then——"

"Toby Bulbox, you are aware that if the ship that bears Henry Conroy arrives safely here we are lost—and why? Because two years ago you and myself were in America, and there became acquainted with a wealthy East India merchant named Henry Conroy. He reveled in gold; we were in bad luck and poverty. We gained his friendship, and one night trapped him into an old rookery in New York, while we drugged his senses, robbed him of his wealth, planted our knives in his body, and left him for dead."

"But he's come to life again," put in the frightened Mr. Bulbox.

"We left America and came to England; that man's money has made us rich, and now he arises, as it were, from the dead, to expose and ruin us when we have imagined ourselves secure and unsuspected."

"Can't we prevent his coming some way or other?" suggested little Mr. Bulbox

The Spaniard's face grew meditative; he was thinking of an evil scheme.

"We must," he slowly answered, without raising his dark eyes from the floor.

"How?"

"Who keeps the stone tower and beacon light at the coast above?"

"An old man named Jones lives there with his wife, alone, I believe."

"The place is quite lonely, ain't it—especially at night," and Mandra's face looked like a demon's.

"Yes, very lonely, not a house within a mile or two. Why do you ask these questions?"

"Never mind, Bulbox—I want to use you to-night."

"All right, sir, I ain't engaged anywheres," and Bulbox laughed all over his little face.

"Then meet me at the steps of the stone tower at 9 to-night," said the Spaniard.

"I shan't fail, Mr. Mandra, and whatever your plan is I know it is a good one."

"Never fear for that, Bulbox," and Mr. Mandra nodded his head at his confederate with a look of assurance on his face, "and I've not the slightest doubt but you and I shall have no cause to fear Henry Conroy after to-night."

The shades of a murky night began to fall, and rain clouds to gather thicker in the sky. At 8 o'clock that evening, in the midst of a terrible storm, Mr. Mandra leaves his house by the back door, dressed in an old ragged suit, large boots and muffled to the eyes, which is a very strange proceeding for a man like the owner of Mandra Manor.

A stormy night on land—a terrible night on the sea and on the English coast.

The old stone tower stands on a high projected rock, reached by a steep flight of steps, hewn in the rocky pass, and overlooks the now raging waters of the surging sea. Around the tower no shrub or vegetation can be discerned—nothing save a rugged, barren, desolate piece of huge rock and the gray, old pile, the stone tower.

On this wild night, and just as the storm began to double its fury, old Silas Jones, keeper of the beacon tower, having lighted the beacon-light on the cliff, some twenty yards from the tower, entered the little tower kitchen with his lantern in his hand.

His old wife was seated at the little table, drinking her cup of tea, as her husband came in.

"Lord! old woman, it's a night, I tell ye!" said the old man, taking off his coat and hanging it up.

"The worst we've had in years—don't you think so, Silas, dear?" asked Mrs. Jones.

"Yes, indeed. I pity the vessels on the sea to-night."

At this moment a most deafening peal of thunder shook the tower, and made the old couple tremble.

"You lit the light, Silas."

"Of course, Sally, why do you ask?"

Mrs. Jones went over to the large window which overlooked the raging sea, and gazed out.

A great flash of lightning caused her to step back.

Yet, by that lightning's flash, she beheld a ship not far off, struggling through the storm.

"Silas—Silas, come here quick!"

Silas was by her side, and as another flash came, the old man uttered a cry of horror.

"My God! Wife, that ship is heading for the beacon-rock, where she will be dashed to pieces on the rocks that line that portion of the coast. Can't those on board see the danger signal—the beacon-light—which warns them of their peril?"

The wife of the keeper has gone to the door, and looks out on the desolate rock. She rushes back to her husband, with terror on her old face.

"Silas, the beacon-light is out!"

"What!" yells the old man, going to the door. "What devil has done this?"

Quickly lighting his lantern, the old man rushes out of the tower in the direction of the beacon.

Far off in the distance he can hear the shouts of those on board the imperiled ship.

He gains the beacon-pole, and grasps the rope to pull the lantern down, so that he may relight it again.

But he is suddenly caught by two men behind, one of whom hisses in his ear:

"Let that beacon be unlighted, or we will hurl you off this cliff!"

"Who are you, and why, in the name of heaven, do you stop me in my duty?"

"You see yonder ship struggling through the waters toward this part of the coast. That ship, if it ever reaches its port in safety, will prove our ruin. We've put out the beacon that the ship may come where it is now pointing for—these rocks—and you know well what its fate will be."

"Help! murder! help! help!" cried out the faithful keeper.

The two men grasp old Jones and drag him to the stone tower.

Entering the room where the keeper's wife is, they blow out the candle and cast it out the open window, after having bound and gagged the struggling old man. Mrs. Jones, hiding herself in the curtains of their bed, remained unseen.

After gagging the keeper, Gordon Mandra and Toby Bulbox cast him into a corner of the room, and going out of the house, they locked the keeper in. In their haste and excitement they had forgotten the keeper's wife.

A moment after the two villains had locked the door she came forth from her hiding-place, and in a second her husband was free from the cords that bound him.

"Fly, Silas: fly to the village and give the alarm," she eagerly cried.

"And you, Sally? You'll be alone here; they may kill you," groaned the husband.

"No, they won't—go, go—or you poor vessel will go to pieces."

Opening a secret door on the back part of the house, the old keeper disappeared.

Her husband gone in quest of help, the old woman procured a large lantern, and lighted it, she looked out of the window, and then, lantern in hand, she opened a large trap door in the floor and descended down into the cellar of the stone tower through a damp passage, till coming to a stout oaken door, she pulled down a great bolt, opened the door and stood on a ledge of smooth rock, and stood under the very place where the beacon-light pole stood, and where the two wretches above were listening to the cries of distress coming from the doomed vessel, and awaiting its destruction, for Henry Conroy was on board, and they knew it, and it was his life they hungered for.

The courageous old lady treaded with safety the dangerous pass, and fixed firmly in a crevice in the rock her bright, shining lantern—her signal of danger.

A few moments passed, and above the fury of the tempest she heard the sound and tramp of many feet on the rocks above her head, and then two shots, and a loud parley of voices, and she knew her husband had arrived with plenty of aid.

In ten minutes she was up on the cliff, among the villagers and two dead men. They were the dead bodies of Mandra and his accomplice, Bulbox, who in resisting the new-comers, were on the instant shot down like the dogs they were.

The beacon which old Mrs. Jones lighted did its work, and the Wizard was saved, and two days after, when Henry Conroy came to see her and her husband, he left with them a heavy present in the shape of two hundred pounds in gold, which proved to them a Godsend, and made the remainder of their days comfortable and happy in the old stone-tower on the English coast.

"SAY, dad, why is a watch called a watch?" "Don't know" was the impatient answer. "Because it's most always on its guard," exclaimed the boy as he made good his escape through an open window.—Arkansaw Traveller.

THE dudery of the watering place is simply abominable.

SLEEPING POSITIONS.

A medical paper has a new health-preserving racket, that of sleeping with the face downward. These plans and specifications for sleeping are getting a little too numerous. We always try to live up to them. When some old authority, who has got his chemistry full and retired from active slaughter, shouts that a person should sleep with his head toward the north, so that the electric currents will pass through the body on the proper route, we sleep that way. If another moss-grown practitioner, with as good a record for fatality, solemnly asserts that the only authorized and fully guaranteed way to slumber is with the head toward the south, and gives the same reason as the other, we just move the pillow aft and turn in. When still another rival of the pale rider, with his back broken by lifting on the rate of mortality, announces that the only way to get along peacefully with the electric currents is to sleep with the head to the east or west, so that they will slide over the body and butt against the headboard of the bedstead, we promptly, even gladly comply. Every time the word comes along the line for a change it finds us a ready and willing victim. They are coming rather too fast, however. It begins to look as if we could not get through a whole night without veering around to some new direction or position. It will soon be necessary to get up two or three times a night and go down and get the mail and see what the latest chart on sleeping is. Some genius will have to bring out a bedstead with clock-work attached that will keep it continuously moving around and make it occasionally get up on its hind castors and turn a couple of handsprings.

THE INDIANA PLAN.

People in Michigan county, Ind., don't fool away any time in useless courtships. The other day an Indianapolis man went down to a small town in that county to see about some land. As he was waiting at a hotel for a buggy to be brought round a buxom-looking woman rode up on horseback with a grist of wheat behind her. She looked the stranger all over, slid out of the saddle and brushed the creases out of her calico dress and then walked up to him and said:

"Widower or married?"

"Widower, ma'am."

"Over 45?"

"Only 40."

"Worth anything to speak of?"

"About $15,000."

"Good! What d'ye think of me?"

"You'll pass."

"I'm 38, healthy as a bear, worth $12,000, and want a husband. My husband died five years ago. Refer you to the postmaster as to my character. What d'ye say?"

"It's pretty sudden, ma'am."

"Well, yes. Can you give me an answer in two hours?"

"I will."

"Very well. Don't miss a good thing because you are bashful."

He was back in two hours and she soon rode up from the mill and queried:

"Well?"

"I'll marry you."

"Good preacher right across the way."

They walked over and were married, and are now doing the country on a bridal tour.

NEVER FORGET.

Change your mind with your duty. That is largely the true definition of faithfulness. But memory and mistakes are used as apologies a great deal oftener than necessary. A boy beginning business life will generally lose his place if he pleads such an excuse more than once or twice.

A successful business man says there were two things which he learned when he was eighteen, which were afterwards of great use to him, namely: "Never to lose anything, and never to forget anything." An old lawyer sent him with an important paper, with certain instructions what to do with it.

"But" inquired the young man, "suppose I lose it: what must I do then?"

The answer was with the utmost emphasis, "You must not lose it."

"I do not mean to," said the young man, "but suppose I should happen to?"

"But I say you must not happen to! I shall make no provision for any such occurrence. You must not lose it!"

This put a new train of thought into the young man's mind, and he found that if he determined to do a thing, he could do it. He made such provisions against every contingency that he never lost anything. He found this equally true about forgetting. If a certain matter of importance was to be remembered, he pinned it down on his mind, fastened it there and made it stay.

A FALSE WEIGHT.—"Oh Henry! You must send for the doctor at once. I believe I am getting the dropsy. Now don't delay a moment."

Mr. Deblank—"Why what put that idea into your head?"

"Dear me! Will you ever be satisfied that what I say is true? I got weighed to-day, and, oh, it's awful. I weighed 300 pounds."

"Awful! where did you get weighed?"

"Around at your coal yard."

"Calm yourself, my dear. Your weight is exactly 150 pounds."

A POLICEMAN found two bums making night hideous, and he landed them in the station house with the utmost celerity.

"Ain't your name U-Uranus?" asked one of them.

"What put that in your head?" demanded the policeman.

"I thought so from the er (hic) way Uranus in."

The only response was the dull sickening thud of the policeman's baton.—Texas Siftings.

GLAD TO MAKE HER ACQUAINTANCE.—This story is told of a prominent lady who is sometimes just a little overbearing to those she considers her inferiors. She lives in a fashionable west-end locality, and seldom takes the street-cars. But she did the other day. On approaching the street near her house she said to the conductor, "stop on this side of the street." The conductor rang the bell, but it was too late, and the car kept on to the opposite corner. She was very indignant, and put her indignation into warm words, winding up with: "I am Mrs. Blank." The conductor, nothing abashed, replied: "Glad to make your acquaintance, Mrs. Blank. I'm Tom Jackson."—Cincinnati Sun.

THEY COMPROMISED.—"For goodness sake, Mary," asked the young lady's mother at breakfast, "what was the matter with you and Lewis in the parlor last night? You jawed and quarreled for half an hour like a pair of pickpockets."

"Oh, Lewis wanted me to take the big chair and I wanted him to take it because he was company, you know."

"How did you settle it finally?"

"Well, mamma, we—we—we compromised and both of us took it."

A ROBIN which spent a good portion of last summer pecking at its reflection in a cellar window, on a street of Peabody, Mass., is reported by a local paper to be back again and already at busy as before in its "foolish attempt to drive away his shadow."

N. Y. ARCADE RAILWAY.

The long struggle over the New York arcade bill has ended. Gov. Hill, after suggesting amendments protecting the rights of property-holders and providing for paying three per cent. of the gross receipts of the company to the city, with other minor changes, all of which were adopted, has signed the bill. The road has a strong backing, and it will need it, for the cost of constructing this underground railway is put at not less than forty millions of dollars. There will be no difficulty, however, in getting all the money required, for the company is composed of some of the wealthiest citizens of New York, and when the road is completed along Broadway and Madison avenue to its terminus, the travel on it will be immense, and, in addition to this, the plan is so devised as to admit of a freight traffic also. The undertaking is a stupendous one. It involves the construction of strong retaining walls to protect the vaults belonging to houses abutting on Broadway and the other streets through which the road is to pass, and the making of ample provision for removing all the underground pipes, for gas, water, steam and tubes for carrying the electric wires that now underlie the streets. The plan as adopted calls for a central subway some twenty feet or more below the surface of the streets. On the ground floor, so to speak, of this subway, two separate and distinct lines of tracks are to be laid. The roof of this tunnel, or arcade, as it is called, is to be supported by pillars running along each side of the roadway, and also along the middle, where they mark the division of the tracks. Partitioned off from each side of the railway by strong walls, a space is left of four feet on each side of the street next the curb to form the galleries in which all the underground pipes are to be arranged, the depth being ample for taking them all in. These galleries will be accessible by gratings from the street, and by the stairs of ingress and egress at the different stations along the line of route at which passengers will be received and discharged. The great difficulty of constructing a road under Broadway has been the lack of some method of disposing of the underground pipes. This difficulty has been overcome by setting apart the galleries referred to for their reception, and as men can go down in them and make repairs without hereafter disturbing the bed of the street, this of itself will be a great improvement over the existing method. The roof of the arcade roadway, which is to sustain the surface travel, is to be of iron, supported, as we have said, by rows of pillars and overlaid by a preparation that will keep it water-tight. Above this there will be concrete of sufficient thickness to bring it to the level at which the material forming the surface of the roadway comes in to complete the work. All this has to be done at the cost of the company, and as it includes not only the making of the subterranean arcade and the six galleries for pipes, but also an entirely new roadway for surface travel, it is evident that the cost will be very great. Will such a road, costing at the outset forty millions of dollars, pay a reasonable amount of interest on the capital invested in it? We see no reason to doubt it. The Metropolitan and Metropolitan District Railways in London, which run partly underground, and are altogether subterranean for much longer distances than is contemplated by the New York Arcade Railway, have been successful from the beginning, and have proved invaluable in relieving the throng of vehicles on the streets, and in affording rapid communication between important points, the annual number of passengers on the Metropolitan Railway alone being now about sixty millions. In New York, and indeed in all our large commercial cities, there is more local travel in proportion to population than in London, and much more than in Paris, where an underground railway is now being constructed. The New York Arcade Railway Company propose to begin the work of excavation at different points within the next ninety days, bridging the trenches as they proceed, so as not to interfere with the surface travel. But there seems to be a possibility that the legality of the company's charter will be contested by the holders of the original charter for a railway under Broadway, and on the further ground that the grant of the right of way violates the provisions of the general railway act. It is the fate of almost all great enterprises to encounter at the outstart obstructionists, and with so many competitors in New York for railway franchises it would be strange indeed if the Arcade Railway Company were an exception to the rule.—*Balt. GEN. GRANT CORRECTED.

In one page of "Memoranda on the Civil War," in the current number of the Century, Gen. William Farrar Smith defends himself most effectually against what he makes out plainly to have been an unjust and vicious assault contained in a paper by Gen. Grant, published after his death. Gen. Smith says that when an assertion of fact is made by one of world-wide reputation it is generally accepted as true. He here points out a popular habit which certainly prevails very widely; and which very often injures good men and gives undeserved credibility to those who write loosely or maliciously. That Gen. Grant did one or the other of these is very manifest from Gen. Smith's reply. Grant wrote in his Century article that Gen. Smith's promotion to the rank of major general shortly after the battle of Chattanooga was confirmed on his (Grant's) recommendation; he found a "decided prejudice" against it by a majority of the Senate and he soon afterwards found out for himself that these prejudices were "well founded."

Such a statement as this, unsupported by any evidence or reasons, Gen. Smith may well say it was calculated to injure him if not met; and he replies to it with dignity but with prompt and proper emphasis. He shows that instead of his promotion shortly following the Chattanooga battle, that event occurred November 25, 1863, and his name was not sent to the senate until March 15, 1864; it was returned to the president on March 18, with the request that the date of rank should conform to the date of nomination; instead of any delay to confirmation being interposed or any prejudice manifested, it was confirmed the very day it came back to the Senate, and during all this time Grant was not in Washington at all, and could have had nothing to do with overcoming the senatorial prejudice he alleges against Smith.

Gen. Smith furnishes extracts from letters written by Grant so late as July, 1864, testifying to his efficiency in service, readiness in expedient and skill of management in action. He was removed from command during an absence of ten days, with leave, for reasons which nothing connected with the exercise of his military duties could have inspired, and for twenty-one years Gen. Smith has had to remain in ignorance of these reasons. This was certainly an act of gross injustice to an officer whom Grant had so lately highly commended, and it is aggravated by the posthumous publication which has called out Gen. Smith's reply. It goes to show that the "memoirs" and experience of individuals with which the country is being flooded may be of interest as personal experiences, but they are not to be taken without great allowance for real history.—Lancaster Intelligencer.

A MOTTO FOR FUTURE USE.—"They discharged our brother and we struck," said Martin Irons after the great uprising in the Southwest, and a sad and bitter lot of men are the old employees of the Missouri Pacific Railroad in consequence. After seeing the total failure of their effort, most of them are to-day without employment. They must see that Mr. Powderly and others who disapproved of the strike and sought to end it six weeks ago, were right. "Stick to Powderly," said the Sun; and how much better it would have been if that advice had been heeded.

But even after Powderly has gone, there will still be an historical figure whose words should be considered by everybody, especially strikers. "Be sure you're right, then go ahead," said Davy Crockett; and the disastrous feature of the recent strike on the Missouri Pacific was the fact that Martin Irons went ahead first.—New York Sun.

Tuesday Evening, May 25, 1886.

THERE is ground for hope yet; at least the friends of home rule are becoming hopeful again under the confident demeanor of Mr. Gladstone and the defections from the ranks of his opponents.

GENERAL BEAVER is one of the kind of statesmen who are a great deal easier to nominate than elect.—Mahony Local.

The very point that is beginning to give clear-sighted Republicans an uncomfortable amount of uneasiness. Quay can command Beaver's nomination by a Republican Convention, but he cannot command his election by the people of the State.

GOV. HILL, of New York, is proving more than a match for the Republican Legislature, he scoring two points for the Democratic party by a broad and manly policy, whilst they scarcely get one through their narrow and partisan course. He is not only more honest than they, but vastly shrewder.

REPUBLICAN success next November means Quay and Cameron in the U. S. Senate, Cooper running Beaver in the Governor's chair, and Chris Magee in command of the Legislature. There is a remedy: smash the machine!

ALDERMAN JAEHNE has been sent to the New York penitentiary for nine years and ten months. He sold his vote for $20,000 and is now starching shirts.

GEN. W. W. H. DAVIS has been confirmed as Pension Agent at Philadelphia without opposition.

Gen. Rosecrans has likewise been confirmed with only a few votes in the negative. It comes out that Ben. Butler was at the bottom of the futile opposition to Rosecrans, and all because Rosecrans had criticized Butler's bad management of the soldiers' home at Fortress Monroe.

QUAY wants Republican harmony and the United States Senatorship. A Democratic majority in the Legislature was never more urgently needed.

CAPT. ROBERT BRUCE RICKETTS, who with his battery so gallantly defended East Cemetery Hill against the impetuous assault of the Louisiana Tigers, is a leading citizen of Wilkesbarre, a gentleman of fine attainments and sterling Democracy. His great popularity in Luzerne and surrounding counties has led to a spontaneous movement for his nomination for Lieutenant Governor by the Democratic State Convention, and the endorsements from all parts of the State are singularly unanimous. His entire record, especially that at Gettysburg, would make him a very strong candidate, and strong candidates are the need of the hour.

WITH a strong ticket of their own, Democrats need not care what the Republicans may or may not do.

HAS there been partizanism in pensions? Plenty of it; and seen by little penetration. In every community there have been Democrats weak enough to yield to it; secretly, of course. But that game is now at an end. Republicans no longer have pensions to dispense to make Republican votes.

THERE was some bloodshed between the Greeks and Turks last week, and then an armistice.

A CANADIAN vessel without a manifest was seized by the authorities at Portland, Maine, yesterday: and thus fishery retaliation begins.

GOV. PATTISON has appointed Charles J. Harrah, of Philadelphia, a member of the Board of Public Charities, in place of Mahlon H. Dickinson. The board met in Philadelphia on Thursday, and on motion of Dr. J. W. C. O'Neal, Mr. Philip C. Garrett was chosen president for the unexpired term of Mr. Dickinson. Mr. Harrah was elected Chairman of the Executive Committee of the Board. After the adjournment of the Board, a meeting of the Committee on Lunacy was held. Mr. Garrett offered his resignation as Chairman. It was accepted, and Dr. Thomas G. Morton was unanimously elected to fill the vacancy.

ARCHBISHOP GIBBONS, of Baltimore, has received from Rome official notification of his appointment as Cardinal.

W. U. HENSEL, Esq., will address the literary societies of Washington and Jefferson College June 21.

STANTON and Boutelle were Republicans of the same stamp, and now the latter asks Congress for $50,000 to erect a statue of the former in Washington. Both gloried in reviling President Lincoln, who was not sufficiently radical for them.

GEN. BEAVER is the "Calamity Candidate," according to the Philadelphia Times.

THE Republican State ticket, says the Patriot, will be Beaver for Governor, Davies for Lieutenant-Governor, A. Wilson Norris for Auditor General, Thos. J. Stewart, of Montgomery county, for Secretary of Internal Affairs, and General Osborne for Congressman-at-Large. This programme involves the basest betrayal of Major A. E. Montooth and Chill. W. Hazard. Both these gentlemen are relying on positive pledges of nomination, but both will be sacrificed because the interest of the ring requires that course to be pursued. Quay and Magee will pretend to "fall out" about some part of the ticket, but the trick will be worked as it was last year, in the interest of the ring boss and his helpers.

THE Chicago Tribune, Republican, says it is clearly established that not a single Irishman was with the anarchists in the recent riot.

A GLANCE at the balance sheets of the Treasury for the first nine months of this fiscal year, says the Patriot, shows very careful and satisfactory management on the part of the administration. A comparison with the Treasury operations of previous years makes it quite evident that there has been more care or more economy shown, or perhaps both, than there used to be in the management of that department.

The figures show that there has been an increase of $7,000,000 in the revenue and a decrease of about $16,000,000 in the expense. There cannot be better phases of business management exhibited than an increased income and a decreased outlay of money.

It was about two years ago that Republican editors and orators were warning the people against the disastrous consequences of putting Democrats at the head of the government. It was represented as being particularly hazardous to the financial interests, and the pictures drawn foretold nothing short of a complete wreck of the Treasury in such an event. But the fallacy of such representations is proved by the exhibit, which shows more money collected and less spent than under the Republican management of the government finances.

THE two Democratic papers in Union county have been consolidated to bring about peace in the party.

CONGRESSIONAL.

On Monday of last week Hon. Jno. A. Swope introduced bills granting a pension to Mrs. Sally M. Stewart, to increase the pensions of Charles L. Lowrie and Chambers C. Mullin, and to restore the name of Wm. C. Stair to the pension roll.

In the Senate on Thursday the committee on Pensions reported the bill for the relief of Samuel Kitzmiller.

Petitions from all parts of the country for the redemption of the trade dollar have been presented, among others several by Hon. Jno. A. Swope from citizens of York and Wellsville.

Senator Cameron on Friday presented petitions from a number of granges against free wool and counterfeit butter.

Senator Sewell gave notice that he will ask the Senate to take up the Fitz John Porter bill immediately after the pending bankruptcy bill.

Mr. Dibble's resolution for changing the administrative machinery of the Government by providing for the election of two Vice-Presidents, has been reported favorably by the majority of the Special Committee on the Election of President and Vice-President, and there has also been a minority report in favor of Mr. Randall's resolution providing for the permanent continuance of the Electoral College to act in case of any emergency.

AN association of textile manufacturers was formed in Philadelphia Monday, embracing nearly all the prominent firms. Over one hundred and fifty of the wealthiest producers of the city and surrounding country, representing, it is estimated, $150,000,000 capital, were present. The objects of the association are the establishment of fair and uniform wages, the prevention of strikes, the settlement of differences between employers and operatives and the protection of the members from worthless and incompetent operatives. The members are mutually pledged to one another in case of strikes or demands for advanced wages by their employes, and should a strike occur in any one factory the mills of all will be summarily closed until the strike is settled satisfactorily to the employer in whose mill it occurs. Each firm in the organization will be required to make a deposit of notes or bonds to represent a percentage on his pay-roll, and this fund will be used in reimbursing manufacturers for losses sustained during strikes.

HAVING successfully prosecuted the Buttermore case, Attorney General Cassidy has again turned his attention to the orphan school rascals. It is said that the syndicate will be under arrest within a week or ten days, and the indictments will not be drawn so loosely that a four-horse team can be driven through them, either.—Greensburg Dem.

CHAIRMAN COOPER'S Media American warns the Republicans of the State that the next Legislature will have to reapportion the State into Congressional, Senatorial and Legislative districts, "a matter involving the greatest interest, as the next Presidential election may be thrown into the House of Representatives." Just so, and we hope that Democrats everywhere will remember this also.—York Gazette.

THE action of Gen. Black, since his appointment as Commissioner of Pensions, ought to set at rest the tiresome campaign falsehoods about Democratic opposition to pensions and pensioners. The amount of work done by his office in the year of his incumbency is the greatest for the same length of time in its history. In the month of March alone, just passed, 8,595 pensions were granted. The honorable soldier never suffers at Democratic hands.—Valley Spirit.

NOW that a number of the blatant anarchist leaders are in its iron clutches, and others likely to be, they will have some reason to desire that law be abolished.

THE B. & O. Railroad bridge across the Susquehanna being finished, the trains of that company will now meet the Chester branch of the Reading Railroad on the west bank of the Schuylkill at Philadelphia, and run to New York over the Jersey Central, as per new traffic contract between them for three years.

LET us take fresh advantage of Republican weakness by nominating a ticket of strong men. This done half the fight will be already won.—Chambersburg Spirit.

THE Republicans of Franklin county last week nominated: Assembly, Dr. H. G. Critzman, George J. Balsley and Cyrus T. Keefer; Sheriff, Jacob S. Mowery; District Attorney, Geo. W. Atherton, Esq.; Director, Levi D. C. Hensor; Surveyor, John B. Kaufman; Congressional Conferees, M. A. Foltz, A. McElwain and John Wilhelm.

A HORSE in a steeple chase at Pimlico last week fell and broke his neck.

AN article by Austin Dobson, illustrated by Henry Sandham and Alfred Dawson, will be the opening paper in the June Century. It is entitled "A Literary Ramble along the Thames from Fulham to Chiswick"; and the paper contains a "timely" map of the University course.

IN a railroad collision, near Binghampton, New York, on Sunday morning, Forepaugh's circus had 7 men injured and much circus property destroyed.

AT Reading, Yocum Bros., employing over one hundred hands; Glaser & Frame, one hundred and seventy-five hands, and several other large cigar manufacturers, in all employing over five hundred men, closed down indefinitely on Wednesday, because of demands for an increase ranging from ten to forty per cent., according to the grade of goods manufactured.

DR. DIO LEWIS died of erysipelas, at Yonkers, N. Y., on Friday, aged 62.

THE Newville Enterprise says that one night last week a cow and bull belonging to Jacob Weaver, living a short distance east of town, got their horns locked together and could not separate them and in struggling around the cow was killed and the bull also badly hurt.

IN the Luzerne county courts Judge Woodward has decided that a judgment entered on the 22d of February, Washington's birthday, is legal. The defendants in the case sought to establish the fact that judgment entered on a legal holiday would not hold.

HAS the Hon. T. V. Cooper learned that the Hon. Matthew Stanley Quay has decided to be United States senator himself? He is running already in Lancaster and Philadelphia.—Lanc. Intel.

A DISCRIMINATING JUDGE.—In Cincinnati a few days ago, Thomas Gorman, a workingman and an old soldier, knocked down one Charles Miller, who insisted that the red flag should wave over labor men. When Gorman was arraigned before Judge Fitzgerald for the assault he pleaded guilty to the assault, but added that when Miller declared for the red flag, "I forgot myself and knocked him down; I fought under the stars and stripes and I couldn't stand it." The Judge promptly said: "You can go; I wish that there had been 100 Gormans at Bellevue on May 2." The red-flag prosecutor was then reprimanded and both discharged.

MR. BROWN, of San Antonio, Texas, became angry and swore in the presence of Mrs. Williams. She objected, and he told her to help herself if she could. So she told her husband, and Mr. Williams at once loaded his pistol, sought Brown, and found him eating supper. "Did you swear in my wife's presence?" asked Mr. Williams. "I did," answered Mr Brown. Thereupon Mr. Williams shot Mr. Brown dead.

QUAY'S BOSSHIP.

It is possible that Mr. Quay knows better than other people how much arbitrary personal bossing the party he is running will stand. But to an outsider it looks as if he was extensively overdoing the business. Away last year he decreed the nomination of Beaver, and the only reason alleged was that Beaver must be vindicated, and the Independents of '82 condemned, and sentenced to swallow at least that much of the rejected medicine. The real reason, however, was that Quay needed, and was determined to have, his own man, wearing his own brand, for governor, to enable the bosses to control the caucus for senator. Still there was no serious kicking. The orders were issued and Beaver was nominated by Quay without ceremony. No one doubts that the convention will ratify Mr. Quay's appointment of the candidate, with practically no dissent.

The consequences of the selection are already apparent. Until a few weeks ago Cooper, Bayne, Grow, Wharton Barker, Mitchell and others were running, or supposed they were running, for senator. All pretense of that kind has ceased. Mr. Quay is the only candidate in the field. All the old ring elements are combined on him. Kemble goes on his bond; Livsey stays in the treasury; Magee "has his whack"; and all the high contracting parties are content. The people may talk and hold conventions, and declare and resolve, and go on as they please about this matter of choosing a United States senator, but should Quay carry his state ticket and his legislature, no other name but his will be considered in the so-called Republican caucus.

In addition to Beaver's name, Mr. Quay has now slated the names of Davies and Norris. Davies comes in by a little stretch of the "vindication" plan, but on what pretense does Norris take a place on the ticket without consulting the convention? No one disputes the fact. He is there: he is just as securely slated, and therefore nominated, as Beaver or Davies. But Mr. Quay is not going to do this job by halves. He understands that his nomination and election to the office of state treasurer was intended to constitute him the boss of the Republican party, and he has made up his mind to do the work thoroughly, in the lump and in detail.

He has already appointed three of the state ticket, and will provide the others when he gets ready. Meanwhile he is giving attention to the composition of the legislature, and directing the choice of candidates in the various districts. Here, for instance, he has ordered the election of Sunny over Stehman because Sunny will be handy in the caucus. In Philadelphia he has decreed the slaughter of Senator Adams, who is not sufficiently servile; while in Lawrence county we are told there has been "a campaign with money in it," and the delegation will be unanimous for Quay for senator.

It is possible that honest, self-respecting Republicans will stand by and see the machine do this kind of work without protest, but we don't believe it. It is possible that the Independent leaders, with the fifty thousand Republicans who voted for Wolfe in '81, and the forty thousand who voted for Stewart in '82, will submit in silence, shame and fear; but it is not likely. The state is not yet ready to be handed back, bound and dumb, to the keeping of the old railroad and treasury ring. Some Republicans are more attached to the state than they are to the party, and others are more attached to the party than they are to the ring bosses.—Lancaster Intelligencer.

NEW OXFORD RECORDINGS.—The Decoration exercises at New Oxford next Saturday will begin at 8 in the forenoon, to enable citizens to attend at Gettysburg or other points later in the day. There will be a procession of schools, Sunday schools and citizens generally, headed by the Cornet Band. Rev. W. C. Hesser, of the M. E. church, will deliver the address. Flowers and vocal music are to be provided by committees of ladies and gentlemen. A detail will be sent to Conewago Chapel to decorate the graves of Adjutant Martin and others.

Hampton, East Berlin, Abbottstown and Hanover will also have Decorations on Saturday.

The wet weather kept the farmers back, but now they are busy getting out their corn and potatoes. Wheat and grass look very promising.

To the farmer friends of the COMPILER: You will confer a favor upon the editor, and through him upon its host of readers, if you will place before him some of your various agricultural experiences and observations. It will not make you poor and may make them rich indeed. The editor, I know, will be pleased to hear from you. Your correspondent has had some little knowledge of farming, and expects occasionally to give his ideas.

Edward H. Wentz, of York county, had his hand badly hurt at Jacob Leppo's barn-raising by the slipping of a log.

Capt. Luther Y. Diller, of East Berlin, has applied for a pension on account of disabilities received in the service.

A farmer in the neighborhood of Hampton had two cows to bloat on clover; one so badly as to require the knife in the back.

The indications point to a good fruit crop.

The borough fathers have laid a three-mill tax for borough purposes. O.

THADDEUS STEVENS' ESTATE.—The litigation in the Thaddeus Stevens estate is developing some interesting questions of law. It seems that the old commoner left a large sum of money to be appropriated to the founding of an institution in the event that the legatee, his nephew, should not continue sober and temperate a certain length of time. This the nephew did not do, therefore his legacy lapsed. In the meantime a Harrisburg attorney commenced proceedings to collect a note given by Mr. Stevens many years ago as administrator or trustee of another nephew. This action was going on swimmingly when the Supreme Court knocked it into a dizzy and hopeless state by a decision in York's appeal, which makes an executor or trustee to plead the statute of limitations; and as the claim against Mr. Stevens was a very old one, it was barred by this decision. Now, however, the lawyers in Lancaster and the lawyers in Harrisburg have made up their minds not to plead the statute against each other's client, and in this way divide the estate between the nephews. The only possible hitch in this arrangement is, what will the executor of Mr. Stevens do? This gentleman is the Hon Edward McPherson, and if he acquiesces in this plan of the lawyers the money will go as they desire, but if he objects and pleads the statute of limitations, then the money would have to be applied to the establishment of the institution mentioned in the will. The curious and interesting question is, can Mr. McPherson plead the statute against the wishes of the nephews in the interest of an institution not yet created or in existence, or will he allow the nephews to take the money and thus defeat the intentions of Mr. Stevens? The matter will be followed with interest.—Shippensburg News.

MRS. PENDLETON KILLED.—Mrs. George H. Pendleton, wife of the U. S. Minister to Germany, was accidentally killed in Central Park, New York, on Thursday, by a runaway accident. She was out driving with her daughter, Miss Jennie Francis Pendleton. The horse ran away and as the driver could not recover control of him Mrs. Pendleton and her daughter jumped out. Mrs. Pendleton struck on a hard pavement and fell heavily against the pebbled gutter and was almost instantly killed. Her daughter was more fortunate, as she fell upon a grass plot, and though badly hurt, her injuries will not prove fatal. Mrs. Pendleton left her husband in Berlin two months ago to go to New York with her daughter to attend the funeral of her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Frank K. Pendleton. She had cabled her husband shortly before the accident that she and their daughter would rejoin him in two weeks. Her husband and family are overwhelmed with grief. She was a daughter of Francis S. Key, author of the "Star-Spangled Banner".

FAIRFIELD, May 24.—Our town just now is in its holiday garb. What with the planting and trimming of shade trees, the whitewashing of out-buildings and fences, the painting of houses, and the care bestowed on the flower gardens, I think the town never looked better.

Last week closed the business, for this season, of shipping fat cattle from town. C. H. Walter & Co. took out some very fine ones on Thursday, and S. Sundheimer & Co. quite a lot more on Friday. The feeders all seem to have done well, if their smiling phiz is any indication of their success. Several of them made noteworthy gains in weight, among others, John Donaldson with four cattle made an average gain of 407½ lbs., Geo. Andrew with two made a gain of 900 lbs., H. M. Landis with one a gain of 480 lbs., and with five an average gain of 391 lbs., and so on down the scale, a gain of 350 lbs. being too common to attract attention. Though the prices were not as high as in some former years, the proportionate low price of cattle last fall, with the immense crop of corn, combined to make the business pay, and it would be safe to predict a large sale of cattle for feeding next winter. S.

ARENDTSVILLE ITEMS.—Farmers are well in with their corn crop except a few low places. Grass crop looks very promising.

ONLY HALF ALIVE.—There are hosts of men and women who, to coin a phrase, are only half alive. That is to say, they have seldom if ever any appetite, are nervous, weak, fidgetty and troubled by numberless small pains and aches. In the presence of vigorous, exuberant vitality they seem mere pigmies. Such persons are usually fond of frequently dosing themselves, swallowing in the course of the year enough drugs to stock any apothecary's shop of average dimensions. This, of course, defeats instead of furthering the end in view, viz., the recovery of health and vigor. Were they to seek it from an unfailing source of vitality, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, how different would be their case. Then vigor would return to their debilitated frames, the glow of health to their wan cheeks, that trembling uncertain gait would grow firm and elastic, appetite, that grandest of all sauces, would give a relish for the daily food, were it ever so coarse, and refreshing sleep would crown the tasks of the day.

ENCAMPMENT, DEDICATIONS AND REUNIONS AT GETTYSBURG.—The 12th New Jersey regiment, with ex-Gov. Joel Parker, probably Gov. Abbett, and other officials—the party to number about three hundred—will arrive here this evening, and dedicate their monument, on Round-Top avenue, near Dougherty's house, to-morrow. Col. Wm. Potter, of Bridgeton, N. J., will make the oration.

On Wednesday of next week, June 2, the 15th Massachusetts will dedicate their monument, at the clump of trees on the same avenue, and the monument to Col. Ward, who commanded the regiment, on the Round-Top Branch Railroad, near the Emmitsburg road, where he fell. The party will be large.

An excursion by the 111th and 126th New York, to locate their positions on the battlefield, will come here on Thursday, June 10th.

The same day the 9th Pa. cavalry will visit this place and return in the evening to York to finish their reunion there.

The massive monument of the 1st Massachusetts, at Tipton's, on the Emmitsburg road, will be dedicated on the 2d of July. The big excursion will arrive on the 29th of June.

On Thursday, the 1st of July, at 2 p. m., the monument marking the spot where Gen. Reynolds fell will be dedicated, Col. A. Wilson Norris, of Philadelphia, orator of the occasion. A popular excursion from Lancaster is announced.

On the same day the 75th, 121st and 150th Pennsylvania will dedicate.

The 2d of July will have five monument dedications, and the first reunion of the Third Corps, the latter expected to be very largely attended. Gen. Sickles will be present to make an address, and will probably say what he has never said publicly before in regard to the charge of rashness in bringing on the battle under which he has rested ever since. The speech will be looked for with interest all over the country.

The monuments to be dedicated that day will be the first Massachusetts, the 68th, 99th and 114th Pennsylvania, and the 2d New Hampshire.

On the evening of the same day, (July 2d,) the State Encampment of the G. A. R., on East Cemetery Hill, will open, to continue until the 7th. The "Lambs" and "Razors" have engaged the Rink for a carnival and ball on the 5th.

The cavalry gathering has been fixed for the 7th of July. Gregg's and Stuart's commands will have many representatives from north and south, among others Gov. Alger, of Michigan, and Gov. Lee, of Virginia. Gen. Gregg will also be here.

The G. A. R. Post of Carlisle will run an excursion to Gettysburg July 5th.

APPLICATION will be made for a postoffice at Round-Top Station.

REPUBLICAN COUNTY CONVENTION.—The Republicans had a warm time selecting two representatives to their State Convention, in McClellan's Opera House, yesterday forenoon. The delegates present numbered only thirty. J. S. Witherow, Esq., was called to the chair; F. X. Smith and I. N. Durboraw vice-presidents; G. D. Thorn and R. F. Forrest secretaries, with John H. Slentz and Wm. B. McNair tellers. Resolutions instructing for Beaver, Stewart, Grimeson and Hazzard were adopted, and then the fight for delegates began. The nominees were J. L. Hill, Jr., Esq., ex-Sheriff James Hersh, Col. W. F. Walter and R. F. Forrest, and the first ballot resulted: Hill 26, Hersh 13, Forrest 8 and Walter 9. Mr. Hill was declared elected, and a ballot for the second delegate gave Hersh 13, Walter 10, Forrest 6. The ballots varied little until the 10th, when Dr. J. R. Dickson was brought into the race and given 8 votes and Ephraim Myers 1. At the end of the 13th ballot Walter withdrew, his forces dividing between Dickson and Forrest. Hersh held his own (once coming within one vote of an election) up to the 19th ballot, when he dropped from 12 to 9, and Dickson went up from 7 to 12: on the 20th Hersh had 10 to Dickson 12: on the 21st Hersh 11 to Dickson 13: on the 22d Hersh 9 to Dickson 12, when Hersh withdrew. The 23th and last ballot decided the contest in favor of Dickson by giving him 16 votes to 10 for Myers and 4 for Forrest. All rushed out for fresh air and the Diller hotel. Republican anxiety for "place," even without the "profit," seems as decided as ever.

A number of our sporting men attended the Pimlico races near Baltimore, last week.

W. F. Rittase, postmaster, found among the books and postal laws an old postal guide of 1830, one of the first issued by the Postoffice Department. Adams county had then 10 Postoffices, with the following postmasters: Abbottstown, Jacob Fahnestock; East Berlin, Christian Picking; Fairfield, Wm. Johnston; Gettysburg, William W. Bell; Hampton, Charles Blish; Heidlersburg, Abel Pittenturf; Keener's Mills, William B. Wilson; New Oxford, Francis Hildt; York Sulphur Springs, Harmon Wireman; Petersburg, (now Littlestown,) Francis Leas. In a supplement it gives the offices established between October 1st, 1830, and April 1st, 1831. Fountaindale, with Joseph Baugher as postmaster, was established between the two above dates. We have now in Adams county, according to postal guide of 1883, 39 offices. The distance of each office is given to the capitol of the State and the capitol at Washington, D. C. Thus Gettysburg is 78 miles to Washington and 34 to Harrisburg.

Another table gives the number of offices established from 1790 to 1830. In 1790 there were 75 offices, and the amount received for postage was $37,935. Postmasters' salary $8,198. Incidental expenses $1,881. Transportation of mails $22,081. Total expenditures $32,140. Balance in favor of Department $5,795. Extent of post roads 1,875 miles. While in 1830 there were 8,450 offices and extent of post roads 115,176 miles.

According to the postal law of 1825-27 it was necessary to have correct distances between given points. The postage on a single letter, composed of one piece of paper, for any distance not exceeding 30 miles, 6 cents; over 30 miles and not exceeding 80, 10 cents; over 80 and not exceeding 150, 12½ cents; over 150 and not exceeding 400, 18¾ cents, and over 400 miles 25 cents.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

State Senate.

EAST BERLIN, May 17, 1886.

MR. EDITOR: I notice that the Democracy of Adams county, through their County Committee, have agreed on June ensuing, the 14th, to hold their Convention to nominate candidates for the various offices to be elected in November next. Quite a number of good candidates are spoken of for nomination. The convention will have a fine opportunity to select a good and popular ticket, and, I have no doubt, such will be the result. Among this array of candidates I am glad to hear of Hon. HENRY J. MYERS, of New New Oxford, for State Senator, for the Senatorial district composed of Cumberland and Adams counties. Without any derogation to the other highly worthy aspirants for that office, I would heartily recommend Mr. Myers as a fit and competent man, being "honest, capable and faithful to the constitution," the qualities Thomas Jefferson required of government officers. Besides, and independent of this, Mr. Myers was nominated by the Democracy of Adams four years ago for the same office, but gave way to Cumberland county, for the sake of harmony to the party, which fact should and no doubt will give him the nomination this time, which is also in accordance with the usages of the party every where.

A CHANGE!

Why change so often? Because you tire of reading the same advertisements week after week. We don't want you to tire of them for fear that you will tire of us. There is another great reason for changing so often: Our stock is constantly changing. New Goods to take the place of that sold out. We are now in the height of our Spring Season and new things are arriving almost daily now. We have been here a year and a month. We have had the opportunity of contrasting April of '86 with April of '85 and we found that we did three times the business this last April that we did for the corresponding month in '85. Why? Because there was a want of confidence in new people, who sold goods cheaper than the old rates; "must be trashy goods, or they'll cheat you in measurement," &c.

Our experience now is that every visitor becomes a customer and friend. Our stock is twice as large as it was a year ago. Short profits on cash purchases and fair open dealing have gained for us our popularity. We are not willing to let well enough alone, but are progressive, and mean to make May gain fifty per cent. in sales on large April. How can the gain be made so large? We know, and you know, how April was made to gain on the corresponding month of '85. The same means are still employed and never will be relaxed one iota.

Miss Edith, in her letter of last issue, gave you some information about specialties in Dress Goods. We can only add that new ones are constantly coming and fully a dozen new things have been opened since her report.

We have at all times at least fifty things in Wool Dress Goods at 10, 12½ and 15 cents, which we seldom say anything about, for no reason in the world, as all are full value and many are worth much more.

We will give you in connection a little summary of our Wash Dress Goods stock, with prices. It is always best to buy these goods early enough to get advantage of choice of full stocks. We have 53 styles of Seersuckers, Ginghams and Zephyrs at 8, 10 and 12½ cents, they are plain, plaid, checks and stripes; 17 styles of Crinkles at 10, 12½ and 15 cents; 11 styles of yard-wide Batistes, cream and white grounds, 12½ cents; 9 styles of Fine Linons, painted and plain, 15 cts., (these goods are similar to Batistes but finer cloth); 27 styles of 33-inch Sateens, in solids and fancy, some are hard to distinguish from French, price 12½, 15, 17, 23 and 25 cents. All colors Chambreys 12½ cents. (Laces and Embroideries to match all colors.)

On White Goods, Embroideries and Laces we have doubled our efforts of last season in variety of materials, patterns and prices. We were unquestionably the depot last year from which half the white dresses sold in Gettysburg came. We are prepared to furnish three-fourths of them this season.

The success we had on Parasols and Sunshades last season was due to the same cause as our success in everything—assortment and low prices. True we sold a great many at cost at the end of the season, but the large stock we carried made our sales three times what they would have been on an ordinary stock. We are prepared this season, with new shapes, new colors and new prices, to show at this date fully 100 styles, with more bought to come. Our price is lower than last season. We bought them cheaper and the gratifying experience of last season allows us to do with shorter profits than before. "Nimble sixpence, &c."

"Our Own" Kid Gloves in 3 buttons or 5 hooks, $1.00, are the leading kid gloves in this county. Our 50-cent 3-But. Kid Gloves are unequalled; one year's experience, no complaint. Pure Silk Jersey Gloves, in black and colors, 5-but. length, 50 cents, 6-but. length, 69 cts., and the best 25-cent Lisle Glove to be found anywhere. We have a Spun Silk Glove at 50 cents, in black and colors, that sells on sight. Hosiery of every description. Gauze and Gossamer Underwear for men, ladies and children. If you can't come to see us send for samples of anything you want.

CARE OF EARTH ROADS

Prof G. E. Morrow of the University of Illinois, favors the Country Gentleman with a revised copy of his paper on this subject as presented to the Convention of Highway Commissioners at Springfield in April. We print it in full.

Road improvement is one of the great problems before the people of Illinois. The condition of its roads is, in good degree, a measure of the wealth, prosperity and civilization of a nation. It is not enough to have a net-work of railroads, nor to have a few or many great thoroughfares, even if put and kept in the best possible condition. Good roads in every neighborhood are essential not only to the economical transportation of produce, but also to the best development of the people, socially, intellectually and religiously.

More and more our railroads will carry our people and their goods. The stone and gravel to be found in some sections of the State will make it easily possible to have many good MacAdamized roads, even where the material must be transported considerable distances. For years, some have thought it would yet be found practicable to make good roads by the use of burned clay or earth in some form. But for many years there will be thousands of miles of earth roadways in Illinois. Fortunately, when in good condition, these dirt roads are admirable in many respects, and it is also fortunate that work done in making or keeping them in repair, will not have been wasted if it ever be found practicable to MacAdamize them. With the rarest exceptions an earth foundation is the basis of all roads. The stone or gravel applied is chiefly to protect it and keep it in good condition.

A perfect road is straight, level, smooth and hard. We cannot always secure these points, but should do so as nearly as practicable. With the firmly fixed custom in the West of having public roads follow the lines of the government land surveys, there is not often much to complain of in the matter of straightness, and on our prairies there is comparatively little trouble in the matter of levelness. In dry weather there need be no trouble in having any properly made earth road smooth and hard. Surplus water causes nine-tenths of the complaints against our roads. We need to be rid of mud so far as is possible.

No plan has yet been devised by which earth roads can be kept in thoroughly good condition if much used during wet weather. They can be kept in fair condition even during moderately wet weather, if adequate provision be made for promptly removing the surplus water. To most effectively do this is the great object of work in making and repairing dirt roads on the prairies. Chiefly to secure this the road-bed is raised above the general level, its surface is "crowned," ditches are made at the sides, and tiles are laid—frequently the most important point of all, because they most effectively prevent trouble from stagnant water. Doing these things in the best way, and then frequently smoothing the surface and preserving its slope is about all the wisest of us can do in securing good earth roads—aside from building and caring for bridges and culverts, and reducing the grade where this is exceptionally great.

Sometimes it is good economy to vary the rule requiring roads to be kept on section lines. The public can well afford to pay the extra cost of right of way along a ridge, or dry land rather than follow the government survey line through a swamp or ponds not easily drained. The common sense rule in hilly regions that it is often better to go around than over a hill may sometimes be equally applicable where there is a pond or tract of swamp land. [illegible] this.

Grading the road-beds that the surface shall be higher than that of the land on either side is important, but this alone is not sufficient. Often it is not so important as having good ditches kept well opened and with free outlets. The practice of raising a high grade where there are depressions in the roadway and leaving ponds of stagnant water at one or both sides of the road, or of being content with making ditches at the sides without seeing that the water can flow from these, is most objectionable.

In recent tests at the University we have found that dry soil will take up from [illegible] per cent of its weight of water by capillary attraction. When there is standing water at the sides of the road, or where the soil is saturated, it will draw much water even to the height of three feet. The railway engineer, if possible, prevents any water standing within three feet of the surface, though the cars move on the rails held in place by heavy ties often ballasted with stone or gravel. Much more does the standing water at sides of the wagon road do harm. For roads with little travel it may be better not to raise the road bed at all, if ditches and culverts be provided, than to throw up a narrow passage way without provision for draining.

A comparatively narrow raised road way is better than one of greater width, as the surface drainage will be better; but a very narrow bed, with much "crown" or slope to the sides is almost always objectionable, not giving any choice in travel, thus causing deeper ruts. When used while the surface is wet the wheels and horses' feet will certainly make ruts and holes, and in most soils, these are so puddled as to be impervious to water, so that extra slope to the sides is of little importance. If it were practicable to prevent the roads being used during, or soon after rains, the surface of well drained roads would soon become dry and hard. As this cannot be done, we must rely on securing as good drainage as is possible, and on promptly filling the ruts and holes made during the wet weather.

When the land is wet, lines of tile laid at the sides of the road, inside the open ditches will be a very great help in carrying off water, which would otherwise have to be removed—always provided the work is well done, and there be a good outlet for these drains. Tile drainage will not give us ideal roads in wet weather, but it may do more to improve the roads in many sections of the State than any one thing of equally small cost.

It should be remembered that the rights and duties of road commissioners may extend outside the 50 or 60 feet set apart for the road. The good results of grading, ditching and tiling, are often largely dependent upon outlet ditches or drains extending perhaps for a long distance through adjacent lands. If the landowners will co-operate, well; if not, the commissioners should exercise their legal rights. Often the public funds can be more wisely used in making ditches in adjoining lands than by making larger ponds at the roadside in attempts to secure good roads in wet land by further raising the surface.

It is not the province of this paper to give details of road construction or describe the machinery to be used. It may be said, however, that it is to be hoped that the time will soon come when road making and repairing will be done exclusively by men whose special business this is, and not by men working out their tax; that the work of construction and important repairs should be done, whenever possible, in the spring or early summer; [illegible] throwing a lot of unpacked earth on the surface in the fall is an abomination; that it seems probable the day of general use of dumping scrapers has gone by, but that if used, common humanity and economy demand that the surface be made uniform instead of a series of little hills; that it is desirable to have, perhaps, 8 feet of level surface at each side before commencing the "crowning" of the road-bed, as helping to prevent the filling of the ditches; that making side ditches and raising the centre is important even on hilly ground, else there may be great trouble from washing; that careful attention to the small culverts is only less important than providing large bridges where needed.

Most of all does it need to be impressed on many in authority, that it is a great waste to keep up the system of letting the roads alone except once a year or when they become impassable. Within a week, I have been one of hundreds who have been bounced and jolted in farm wagon and light buggy over a leading road, the ruts in which were being slowly filled at cost of time, comfort, horse flesh and injury to vehicles; yet where a day's work by one man and pair of horses, with any one of several road machines would have made miles of this road so smooth that travel over it would have been a pleasure.

We have advanced far enough in civilization to think of making the roadsides places of beauty, covered with grass and with reasonable tree-planting, rather than the home of unsightly or noxious weeds, or having them lined with hedges of willow or osage, 20 feet high, shutting out all view, keeping out the breezes and keeping in all dust, as well as greatly retarding evaporation.

TREASURY STEEL VAULTS

How the National Currency is Made, Counted and Worn Out

The great chilled-iron and steel vaults of the Treasury are objects of much interest to visitors, but only certain ones can be entered by outsiders, and these only on a permit from the Treasurer. The five principal vaults are connected with the Treasurer's office, for the contents of which he is responsible. They are known as the cash vault, the reserve vault, the silver vault, the redemption vault and the national bank vault. The cash vault is used more than all the others combined in the daily transaction of business and presents more interesting features. It is constructed on the most approved modern principles, and is, strictly speaking, an iron-bound apartment lined with gold and silver. The walls, floor and ceiling are of chilled iron built in sections. These walls are over a foot thick, the space between the inner and outer plates of iron being filled with heavy iron balls forming a compact mass, the removal of which would require much time, skill and labor.

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing, where all our national currency is manufactured, occupies a large brick building built expressly for it, at a cost of some $400,000. It has three stories and a high basement, and is in the Romanesque style of architecture. Here 250 plate presses are worked by hand, and over 500 men and women employed in the processes of printing sheets of bank-notes, bonds and internal revenue stamps. The long spacious room, running the entire length of the third story, is a scene of intense activity during business hours. Six hundred sheets per day are printed on each press, and after each impression the delicate copper and steel plate must be removed from the press, carefully wiped dry, polished with whiting, inked and then returned to its place for another impression. The fibre paper must be handled expertly, and everything about the work done with precision and care. All is perfect system and exactness here. The greenbacks and other securities issued by the government, from the time the paper is manufactured until the finished note is issued, are subjected to a system of registering and checking at every step so minute and precise, that the chance of any error or dishonesty in the handling of this most valuable product is reduced to a minimum.

The sheets, before being wet, are delivered to the plate printers counted and charged to them and again counted in the presence of a lady assistant who certifies to the count. Attached to the machines by which the wetting is done are registers which automatically count the sheets a third time as they pass through. Next comes the examining division, where, after the fourth count, the sheets are dried and counted the fifth time. Lady experts then examine the sheets and those which are pronounced perfect go into the hydraulic press, from which powerful machine they emerge in a smooth state ready for printing. Any sheets spoiled in printing—too light or too dark or otherwise imperfect—are thrown out by the examiner, but cannot be destroyed until after passing through a regular prescribed course. The lettering and numbering divisions and the engraving division on the other floors, are interesting also. Visitors are permitted to inspect all the divisions of the bureau and a guide is provided to conduct all who apply on a "tour" of the rooms. Of the 700 or 800 persons employed in the bureau a large majority are ladies, and some of the more difficult and responsible work is performed by lady experts. The bureau turns out an average of $400,000 in notes printed daily.

The redemption division of the Treasury is one of the most interesting and busiest. Here worn and mutilated bank notes, retired from circulation, are examined and counted previous to being cancelled. Every year currency to the value of $150,000,000 is counted, cancelled and destroyed. The counting is done by female clerks, many of whom acquire great skill and seldom make a mistake. Some of these countesses have been at work ten years or more and have handled many millions of dollars. They sit at long tables on which the notes are piled, [illegible] the notes closely scrutinized and counted and then turned over to the officials in charge of the cancelling machine, which is run by a turbine wheel.

No explanation [illegible] of the [illegible] heat [illegible] the sun pass in unimpeded through the glass [illegible]. It is strange that the heat of an ordinary fire should pass freely through a layer of rock salt, whereas it is unable to pass through a pane of common glass, but it is worth observing that while the heat rays of the sun pass through glass with such perfect freedom they cannot find their way back by the same channel. The warmth once inclosed in a hot house cannot escape by the process that admitted it to enter the building; it must filter through the glass panes in the same way as it would any other substance in order to get out again.

A very remarkable story comes from Toulouse, where a working woman was in the habit of leaving her baby under a tree guarded by a faithful dog. As days passed she thought the baby's appetite failed, but still it thrived. One day she found the dog standing over the infant and calmly suckling it. The mother thought the arrangement a good one, and it has gone on, the baby doing well under the treatment.

How's Your Liver?

Is the Oriental salutation, knowing that good health cannot exist without a healthy Liver. When the Liver is torpid the Bowels are sluggish and constipated, the food lies in the stomach undigested, poisoning the blood. Frequent headache ensues; a feeling of lassitude, despondency and nervousness indicate how the whole system is deranged. Simmons Liver Regulator has been the means of restoring more people to health and happiness by giving them a healthy Liver than any agency known on earth. It acts with extraordinary power and efficacy.

NEVER BEEN DISAPPOINTED

As a general family remedy for Dyspepsia, Torpid Liver, Constipation, etc., I hardly ever use anything else, and have never been disappointed in the effect produced; it seems to be almost a perfect cure for all diseases of the Stomach and Bowels.

W. J. McElroy, Macon, Ga.

Constipation

Is a universal and most troublesome disorder. It causes Headache, Mental Depression, impairs the Sight and Hearing, destroys the Appetite, and when long continued, causes Enlargement of the Liver, Inflammation of the Bowels, and Piles. Constipation is speedily cured by Ayer's Pills.

For a number of months I was troubled with Costiveness, in consequence of which I suffered from Loss of Appetite, Dyspepsia, and a disordered Liver. My eyes also troubled me. I was compelled to wear a shade over them, and at times was unable to bear exposure to the light. I was entirely three boxes of Ayer's Pills. I have no hesitation in pronouncing this medicine to be the best cathartic ever made.—James Harris, Delano, Ohio.

I suffered from Constipation, and, consequently, from Headache, Indigestion, and Piles, for years. Ayer's Pills, which I took at the suggestion of a friend, have given me effectual relief. I commenced taking this remedy two months ago, and am now free from Constipation, the removal of which has caused my other troubles to disappear, and greatly improved my general health.—W. Keeler, Amherst, Mass.

I suffered from Constipation, which assumed such an obstinate form that I feared a stoppage of the bowels. Two boxes of Ayer's Pills cured me, completely.—D. Burke, Saco, Me.
